BUDAPEST, July 16.—The "Justice for Hungary" monoplane, "Justice for Hungary," late today, they brought their plane down in the gathering darkness, completing a flight of 3,200 miles from Harbor Grace, New Foundland.

It was the twelfth successful non-stop crossing of the North Atlantic by airplane.

The black ship with white stripes across its nose and the legend "Justice for Hungary" painted on its side roared over the city, circling for several minutes and settled down to earth.

This is the first flight since Lindbergh's passage to Paris in which the pilots set a definite goal for themselves in continental Europe and hit it.

Magyar and Endres were awaited hopefully today by thousands of their countrymen.

They left Harbor Grace, Newfoundland at 11:18 a. m. yesterday. They took enough gasoline for 28 hours flying, 635 gallons.

Michigan Man Backer
Their flight, calling attention to how Hungary fared at the division of lands after the armistice, is backed by Emil Szalay, retired Flint, Mich., sausage manufacturer. He invested $30,000 in the flight as a "debt of gratitude" to his native land. He is now in Budapest awaiting the fliers.

GAS STATION EMPLOYE HERE IS ASSAULTED

Two Slot Machines Looted in Robbery Early This Morning.

SLUG, BIND ATTENDANT

Pair, Posing as Customers, Pull Job on Kenton Avenue, Escape.

Two men assaulted Harry Kerr, 60, attendant at a filling station at Kenton avenue and Fountain street at 6:30 a. m. today and escaped with two slot machines after fruitlessly searching the station for money.

The pair drove into the station shortly after Kerr had opened for business this morning. Posing as customers, they ordered nine gallons of gasoline and some soft drinks, and marked time until a milkman, who had come to deliver milk, had gone.

His With Bottle
One of the men grappled with Kerr while the other struck him over the head with a pop bottle causing two deep cuts. They bound him loosely, searched the station and fled. How much money was in the slot machines was not known.

Police and county authorities canvassed northern Marion county highways in a search for the men this morning but failed to find any trace of the sedan they were driving. License plates for the automobile were issued at Toledo, authorities say.

Both men appeared to be about 35 years of age. They did not show guns at any time and are not believed to be professional holdup men.

Youngstown Prosecutor Denies Charges of Blackmail as Defense Rests Case.

JUDGE TO DELAY DECISION

Court Will Hear Ouster Petition Before Announcing Outcome of Trial.

By The Associated Press
YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 16.—With the defense rested after Prosecutor Ray L. Thomas' denial of every charge made by the state, his blackmail trial was expected to end today.

Common Pleas Judge H. W. Jewell of Delaware, assigned here for the trial, has announced he will not hand down a decision until the hearing on the ouster petition against Thomas, which will begin Monday, has been concluded. Judge Jewell will be one of three to sit in on the ouster proceedings.

Denial Statements
Thomas denied he had told common pleas judges here that he had acted as attorney for Harry Engle, former city traction commissioner, and then sought to prosecute him for blackmail. The five common pleas judges had testified that as Engle's attorney he had learned in furtherance of a blackmail scheme.

Judges' Testimony
The judges testified that Thomas said he never had advised Engle when his services as attorney ended but had led Engle on in order to learn more about the former traction commissioner's schemes.

WASHINGTON IS HIT BY STORM

Hail, High Winds Accompany Pelting Rain; Bolt Kills Virginian.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Lightning scarred trees and buildings, a burned awning on the capitol and a shattered hickory in the White House grounds remained today as handwork of an electrical thunderstorm that broke late yesterday over Washington.

Hail and high wind accompanied a pelting rain. The temperature dropped from 93 degrees to 72 within two hours.

Capitol building police reported lightning had fired the awnings outside the office of Chairman McFadden of the House banking committee. Witnesses insisted the goddass of freedom on the dome was struck, but no damage was reported.

Damage to McFadden's office was negligible. William Tyler Page, house clerk, who was telephoning at the time, was shocked slightly.

Tree Destroyed
A hickory tree 150-yards from the White House, in the northeast corner of the grounds, was destroyed. Twigs and branches were thrown 30 to 40 feet and a concrete filling was flung a short distance.

Lightning struck one wing of the census bureau, starting an attic fire that was extinguished quickly. The heat preceding the storm, probably prevented injuries, as employees had been excused from work.

A number of private dwellings and a church in Anacostia, D. C., were struck. A flagpole at the naval hospital was destroyed.

A giant poplar in Fairfax county, Virginia, near here, upwards of 100 years old and 75 feet high, used by Union troops as a sentry post during the Civil war was set afire.

Airplane Wrecked
An empty airplane at Washington airport was picked up by the wind and hurled into trolley wires. Hardy Grim, 50 year old farmer, was killed by lightning while loading hay on his farm near Kernstown, Virginia.

Three Officers and One Flying Cadet Lose Lives Near Brooks Field.

CADET TAKING LESSONS

Victims Include Major C. V. Hart, One of Army's Few Flight Surgeons.

By The Associated Press
SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 16.—Three officers and one flying cadet were killed four miles south of Brooks field today when the two planes in which they were flying collided in the air.

All four were on duty at Brooks field. They were Major Charles V. Hart, flight surgeon and pilot; Captain Carlos J. Chamberlain, of New York City; Second Lieutenant K. Austin Rogers, flying instructor and Cadet Endicott Longacre.

Witnessed by Others
The two planes, piloted by Major Hart and Lieut. Rogers, were flying at an altitude of 300 or 400 feet when they crashed.

The accident was seen by other pilots, who landed nearby and summoned an ambulance from Brooks field.

Major Hart was one of the few flight surgeons in the air corps holding a pilot's rating, and was one of the pioneers in flight surgeon work.

Cadet Taking Lesson
Captain Chamberlain was flying with Major Hart in training to become a flight surgeon. Chamberlain was a member of the New York national guard.

Lieut. Rogers was flying instructor at the primary flying school and was giving a flying lesson to Cadet Longacre at the time of the crash. Cadet Longacre was taking the basic course.

He is the son of Captain Longacre of the quartermaster corps and was on duty at Duncan field here.

German Hopes Aroused as Banks Are Reopened

NATIONS PLAN AID

Report 500,000,000 Loan Proposal in Paris Today.

BULLETINS

By The Associated Press
PARIS, July 16.—Tentative plans for extending financial assistance to Germany under some form of international supervision were worked out today at a meeting attended by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and representatives of France and Great Britain. It was learned from authentic sources.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Private advice to New York bankers from Paris state that the plan for extending financial assistance to Germany, presented to the French cabinet today, would consist of a loan of $500,000,000, which would be guaranteed by customs receipts.

BERLIN, July 16.—The reopening of the banks after a two-day holiday and the curbing of the purchase of foreign currencies today led the German government to hope it had averted a dangerous financial crisis.

At the same time alarm was felt over the spread of riots by Communists and jobless through a large part of the Reich. At least one person was killed, a number were injured and many were arrested as police laid a heavy hand on attempts to create internal dissension.

Finance Minister Dietrich and a government broadcaster announced the latest measures to instill confidence in the economic structure of the fatherland in a nationwide broadcast last night, appealing to the people to show "a sporting spirit" and get along somehow for a few days more.

Currency Inflated
All over the land radio listeners sat up late to hear a program that could scarcely be listed as entertainment. They heard that the banks would be open but not for withdrawals of savings, that the currency had been expanded by something less than a billion marks, that the sale and purchase of foreign currencies temporarily would be a Reichsbank monopoly, that fines and imprisonment awaited the bootleggers of foreign money, and that confiscation faced the bargain hunter who tried illegally to trade his marks for other units.

The vigorous, admonishing voice of Herr Dietrich warned against wild rumors and urged coolness and common sense. "Even the strongest government can't lead a nation that has lost its nerve," he said.

Rumors that the printing presses once more were turning out bills of marks were described as sheer falsehood. In fact the Reichsbank had resorted to its legal prerogative of meeting the currency crisis by temporarily reducing the gold coverage behind its banknotes to less than 40 per cent, Dietrich said, while at the same time sharply restricting credit to prevent money from expanding beyond the needs of industry.

It was midnight before the address was finished and in many sections listeners were drawn away from their loudspeakers by even more ominous sounds—sounds of disorder. Police and radical elements came to blows in Leipzig, Gelsenkirchen, Inschwerte, Munich, Breslau, Hamburg, Altona, Dresden and Karlsruhe.

Possibly the most serious outbreak occurred in Leipzig, where Communists fired on a police lorry and were beaten off with black-jacks, 26 being arrested. One man was killed and another injured at Inschwerte. About 500 communists fired on police from the rooftops.

Man and Grandson Injured in Two Farm Accidents

A farmer and his grandson of near Caledonia were injured this morning in two accidents an hour and a half apart while making hay on different farms.

John Lyons, 69, of two miles north of Caledonia, suffered a badly fractured left collar bone when he fell from a load of hay at 8 a. m. Wallace Lyons, 19, his grandson and son of Clarence Lyons of two miles west of Caledonia, is in City hospital here for observation after being injured when a hay wagon upset at 9:30 a. m. His chest was bruised and it is believed he is suffering from probable internal injuries. His condition is not serious.

The grandfather was returned to his home shortly before noon after an X-ray picture was taken in the office of a local physician. Wallace was taken to the hospital after a preliminary examination in the office of the physician.

John Lyons fell from the wagon in his barn while hay was being placed in the mow. He fell on his shoulder.

His grandson was thrown from a load of hay on his father's farm when the wagon upset. He was thrown against a wheel.

SHRINERS TO MEET IN SAN FRANCISCO

Chosen for 1932 Convention at Today's Session of Organization in Cleveland.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—San Francisco today was selected for the 1932 convention of the shrine of North America, which concludes its fifty-seventh annual convention here tonight.

Chicago, which appeared to have the inside track at the opening of this year's gathering, failed to press its claims. It was understood the Chicago delegation believed the Shrine convention would suffer from the attractions of the World's fair to be held there next year.

The Shrine will stage another "Night in the Orient" at the Cleveland stadium tonight, with circus acts, dancing and fireworks. A torchlight parade last night brought the largest crowd ever assembled in Cleveland, according to an estimate made by Police Chief George Matowitz. He estimated nearly 500,000 watched the parade from sidewalks, buildings, and the stadium.

The parade started at 9:15 last night and ended at 12:10 this morning. Thomas J. Houston of Chicago became imperial potentate yesterday.

ENTIRE NATION STIRRED

Long Hoped-For Transatlantic Flight Made by Two Army Officers.

By The Associated Press
BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 16.—Captain George Endres and Captain Alexander Magyar landed the transatlantic monoplane "Justice for Hungary" late today.

They brought their plane down in the gathering darkness, completing a flight of 3,200 miles from Harbor Grace, New Foundland.

It was the twelfth successful non-stop crossing of the North Atlantic by airplane.

The black ship with white stripes across its nose and the legend "Justice for Hungary" painted on its side roared over the city, circling for several minutes and settled down to earth.

This is the first flight since Lindbergh's passage to Paris in which the pilots set a definite goal for themselves in continental Europe and hit it.

Before starting, Endres said he would do most of the piloting with Magyar, whom he taught flying, relieving him at the controls occasionally and doing the navigating and radio-casting the plane's call letters, once an hour.

During the morning special trains were transporting hundreds to Matyasfold airfield at Budapest, where the airmen were expected this afternoon. Aviation experts were inclined to believe, however, that the flight would not be non-stop on account of the distance overland from the Atlantic.

Hopes ran high on the basis of reassuring weather reports from the meteorological station telling of good conditions all over the north Atlantic. But reports of poor visibility and low-hanging clouds over Ireland gave rise to fears that the airmen might lose their way. Radio amateurs were tuned in on a 600-meter wave-length to pick up their signals.

By noon 100,000 enthusiastic Hungarians had gathered at the airport and every hour trains rolled in loaded to capacity.

The official welcoming committee, modeling its plans on the American style, arranged to take the fliers by automobile along the principal streets of Budapest to the city hall. This is an honor which never has been granted before.

Throughout Hungary those who had lost hope that a flight of this kind ever would be made were filled with unbounded enthusiasm for the "Justice for Hungary" has become a symbol of the trials and disasters through which the nation has passed.

HARLOW LAYS PAVING PLANS

Service Director Hopes To Have Every Street in City Passable in Winter.

With the purpose in mind of making every street in the city passable every day in the year for all types of traffic including the heavy trucks of the fire department, Service Director D. J. Harlow last year laid out a street building program. A tour of the city yesterday failed to reveal a street that had not received some sort of treatment and which was not in exceptionally good condition. More than 160 streets were included in the service director's program. Old brick, stone and even moulting sand was pressed into service by the director in the carrying out of this program. Nye street for many years almost impassable during the winter months, has been rebuilt with a base of eight inches of moulting sand topped with a thin layer of crushed stone last year as an experiment, and at no time during the winter did the traffic cut through, the service director said today.

A similar treatment is now being planned for Chaffield road from Bellefontaine avenue to Sheridan road. The street passes the new Oakland Junior High school building and is being prepared for the automobile travel which will result from the opening of the school this fall.

Eight inches of moulting sand, donated to the city by the Marion Steam Shovel Co., will be used as a foundation and after being rolled down will be topped with a layer of fine stone. The finished street will form a connecting link between their children's school in autumn to do so without leaving improved roads.

Of all those who have or may have occasion to use these improved streets, there is none more appreciative than Fire Chief McFarland. A number of years ago it was not uncommon for as many as three or four streets to be marked up at the central station as impassable. This winter will find every street in condition to permit the travel of the heavy fire trucks, service Director Harlow said today.

New Ohio Law Brings Many Changes in Taxing Methods

Auditor Thomas Explains Workings of State Code

Changes in Methods of Listing Property for Taxation and Payment of Assessments Are Pointed Out by County Official; To Be Effective Jan. 1.

County taxing methods have many decided changes in the new tax code adopted by the legislature this year, Auditor Thomas pointed out to the county board of directors, with other officials, throughout the busy digesting provisions of the new law, and attempting to bring tax collection machinery to the new setup.

Following paragraphs, the auditor pointed out a number of changes in existing methods of the new tax law.

Three Duplicates

County and Marion county tax assessors will list their property on three duplicates next year instead of one. These duplicates will be for the real property, personal property and buildings, and personal property, including tangible personal property such as livestock, farm machinery, and merchandise, and classified personal property which includes all intangible wealth such as stocks, bonds, notes and mortgages.

When taxpayers go to the auditor's office to list their possessions between Feb. 15 and March 31 each year, they must pay half of their personal property tax for the year at the time of filing the return. Although returns are made between Feb. 15 and March 31, they are dated as of Jan. 1 that year.

Personal property tax and classified property tax are payable at the county treasurer's office during three periods of the year: Feb. 15 to May 1, May 10 to the third Monday in August, and from the third Monday in August to Oct. 21.

Real estate tax will be collected from Oct. 1 to Dec. 21, and from April 1 to June 21 each year. Methods of collecting real estate tax will be unchanged.

Whereas tax on intangibles is now levied under one rate, five rates will be employed in the new setup. On investments, five per cent of the income yield will be assessed; for unproductive investments two mills on a dollar is the rate; on bank and building and loan company deposits, two mills on each dollar are assessed. Shares in and capital employed by financial institutions will be taxable at the rate of two mills on the dollar; and shares and capital employed by dealers in intangibles will be assessed five mills on the dollar. Capital and surplus of domestic insurance companies will be taxed five mills, and money, credits and all other taxable intangibles so listed will be taxed three mills.

Banks to Pay

Depositors in banks and building and loan companies will not be required to list their deposits on the auditor's list, as tax on all deposits will be paid by the banks and loan companies at the rate of two mills. Whether the banks and loan companies will in turn assess depositors at the rate of two mills, or absorb the tax remains to be seen.

Rules more strict than existing ones will govern the collection of taxes. County commissioners will no longer be able to oblige taxpayers by extending deadlines for the semi-annual collections. After 1932 there will be no extensions except those made by the state tax commissions in emergencies.

Rules designed to speed up the collection of delinquent taxes are effective next year.

When no taxes have been paid on a property for three consecutive years, the property must be sold for taxes. Previously, property could be sold for taxes after the fourth consecutive year of no payment.

Also, delinquent taxes on personal property in the future will be listed against the property and filed in the recorder's office as a lien. One of the novel provisions in the new law specifies that the county auditor shall sell land on which no taxes have been paid for three years. This selling has been done by the sheriff, but the new code provides that the auditor shall conduct the sales on the courthouse steps on the second Monday in March.

All delinquent tax on real estate will become payable in five semi-annual installments under the new code. The delinquent amounts will be computed and placed as a lien against the property.

Returns Void

Personal property returns filed with the auditor this year are void so far as taxing purposes are concerned, although they will be used in the drawing of an abstract which will be the basis of the estimated income from personal property in 1932. The returns also form a mailing list for the auditor.

The county auditor beginning next year will make four settlements or distributions of tax money to the political subdivisions each year, twice the number of settlements now made.

The state tax code was completely revised by the general assembly this year as authorized by the constitutional amendment passed by Ohio voters a year ago.

One of the principal objectives of the revision was to relieve real estate of what was considered an unfair share of the tax burden. Another objective which became apparent this year was to provide financial relief for the state, counties and municipalities, which generally were "broke" because of tax delinquencies and increasing operating expenses.

Whether real estate will be relieved under the new setup is yet a question to be decided by placing the new tax laws in operation. If the increased automobile license fees, the cigarette tax and the new tax on bank and building and loan company deposits produce as much revenue as authors of the new code believe, real estate undoubtedly will be freed of a part of the tax burden. However, if these means of raising money are only partially successful, real estate may continue at the present high rates, for the new law provides that real estate may be taxed more than 15 mills for debt purposes in proportion to any decrease in the tax duplicate caused by a shrinkage in personal property or a reduction in real estate values.

Method of Division

If the new laws are a success, the state will obtain new revenue from cigarette tax, the city will obtain most of its increased revenue from the new tax on intangibles, and the county will get a new source of money for operating expenses in the new automobile license tag law.

The cigarette license tax will collect for the state two cents on each package of 20 cigarettes sold during a two-year period beginning Sept. 1, 1931. The state gets all of this increased amount.

The new automobile license plate fees will increase the amount of money received annually by the county about $93,419. The state and city will receive approximately the same amounts as before from this source.

The revenue from all intangibles will be divided among the state, municipalities, school districts, school libraries, county parks and township parks, but will give nothing to the county and townships.

Hardin County Reports High Yields of Wheat

KENTON, July 16.—With a yield of 52 bushels plus per acre, G. T. Albright, farmer of south of Kenton, now claims the state record for wheat production.

Wheat threshed at the S. M. Seitz farm, six miles west of Kenton, made an average of 50 bushels per acre on a plot of 6.5 acres. The yield was 325 bushels, machine measure.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!*
Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY Instead"

Place your finger on your Adam's Apple. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead.

Here is what one of America's great scientists, whom we retained to study LUCKY STRIKE'S manufacturing process, says about the mellowing effect of Ultra Violet Rays which are included in our exclusive "TOASTING" Process:

"The effects of this ultra violet treatment on the tobacco have been tested and are found to involve an increase in what is called the 'mildness' of the tobacco."

One of America's greatest writers and editors says this:

"When I visited Reidsville and went through the LUCKY STRIKE plant, I found one explanation for the growth of LUCKY STRIKE. Your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of tobacco is a splendid example of achievement. It is the new order of the day."

Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America which offers you the throat protection of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process—that secret heating process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobacco, and which includes the extra mellowing benefits of modern Ultra Violet Rays. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple". Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Mortgage Cancellations Here Exceed New Loans, Recorder's Report Shows

Mortgages totaling $1,000,000.00 on Marion and Marion county property were cancelled during the year ending July 1, the annual report of Charles A. Markert, county recorder, shows. The report was forwarded yesterday to the secretary of state to be used in compiling Ohio statistics.

Mortgages cancelled exceeded in volume the mortgages filed during the year by a margin of $329,553.85, the report discloses. Mortgages placed during the period aggregated $757,345.03.

Lower Than 1930

With cancellations exceeding new mortgages, an unusual condition this year is reflected. Normally the new mortgages are greater in volume than those cancelled during any year. This is indicated by the 1930 report which shows $2,618,706.24 worth of mortgages were filed during the year ending July 1, 1930 while cancellation for the same period amounted to $2,522,492.12.

Mortgages cancelled during the last year involved 7,402 acres of land and 547 city lots as well as six acres of land within corporation limits. A total of 645 mortgages were cancelled.

Mortgages filed during the same period number 558, involve 12,647 acres of land, two acres of land inside corporation lines, and 411 city lots.

Figures on mortgages filed and cancelled during the year do not include railroad mortgages.

One thousand and seventy-seven deeds involving 16,741 acres of land were recorded during the 12-month period, a decrease from 1,956 deeds recorded during the preceding year.

On a majority of real estate sales, the consideration listed is $1, this figure being used to conceal the actual sale price in many instances. Nine hundred and five transactions involving 13,237 acres of land were recorded last year as compared with 1,698 transfers in the preceding year listing the sale as $1.

One hundred and eighteen city and village lots sold last year. During the preceding 12 months, 181 lots sold, according to the report.

Twenty-five leases were filed. These figures are considerably below those of the 1930 report which shows 45 leases filed July 1, 1930. Only two leases of agricultural land were recorded during the last year. They involved 123 acres and a consideration of $2,000. A year ago 475 acres of farm land were leased for $12,757.50.

INCREASE IN AUTO DEATHS FORECAST

Report for First Half of Year Above Average Figures of 1930.

By The Associated Press
HARTFORD, Conn., July 16.—Unless the second half of the year shows a material drop in motor vehicle fatalities, 25,000 persons will be killed in automobile accidents in the United States this year, it is estimated on the basis of figures gathered by an insurance company here.

The figures show that, at this rate, the number of deaths in accidents would be around 2,000 more than the record for last year, and would bring the loss of life up to more than 95 daily for the entire country.

Reports from state officials for the first five months from a majority of states, show an increase in automobile deaths over the same period last year of 57 per cent, bringing the loss of life for the first five months up to more than 11,800, and with deaths in June not likely to affect the five months average materially. Of all the states reporting, decreases were reported in only eight for the first five months of the year. They were Idaho, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina and Vermont.

On the basis of these reports, the approximate monthly loss of life from automobile accidents is 2,400 for January, 2,900 for February; 2,200 for March, 2,500 for April, and 2,700 for May. The average rate of increase if maintained for June would bring the monthly death record up to approximately 2,900.

Daily Proverb—"He that was never acquainted with adversity has seen the world but on one side and is ignorant of half the scenes of nature."

It's just possible that a form of relief which would be appreciated in this great land of ours as highly as any other could be worked by declaring a moratorium on politics.

According to Major General Smedley D. Butler, a man has to do to swear once or twice and a reputation is fastened on him for life. We take it that Smedley's reputation is riveted fast.

And now a parson down in Cotton Valley, Louisiana, has broken the sermon marathon record by going 58 1/2 hours without a break. Isn't it about time for preachers to get away from the freak stuff and get back to religion?

The Hotel Shelburne in Atlantic City, not so much to look at as some other there but one of the "swankiest" on the island has been placed in the hands of receivers. It's evident that the bond-clipping element also has felt the pinch of the depression.

Awful thought for us hard-working spreaders of joy and sunshine in paragraphs! Thomas L. Chadbourne remarks that "we are all meditating in the business world whether there will be any fittest when the survival comes."

Aristide Briand may have been right when he stated Americans invent everything, but do not profit by them, but when he cited that they invented cocktails, "but do not drink them," we very gravely fear that Aristide has become the victim of some American given to joshing.

Three Chicago killers have been sentenced to prison for 199 years. In the absence of executive clemency and undue activity on the part of the Illinois parole board, that should keep them where they belong for a reasonable period.

It's a bit disturbing to read about the crashing of a three-inch meteorite on the lawn of a home near Lewistown, Montana, but it's hardly probable that a little thing like that will be considered worthy of notice when the sky fills up with flying machines of one kind or another.

It appears that the dismissal of Dr. Ray O. Hall from the department of commerce was the result of his protests over the omission in its printed form of certain comments made and conclusions drawn by him in reporting certain statistics which he had compiled in the course of his regular employment as a statistician. Possibly the doctor thought he had been hired to serve as a political economist or a fiction writer.

Senator Hawes Gets into Trouble.

One of the senators from Missouri, Harry Bartow Hawes, has jumped into prominence this week in the public press for doing something he had better left undone—a dangerous kind of publicity for a politician.

Senator Hawes, a champion of Philippine independence, took part in a great public demonstration against the government of the United States last Sunday. His companion was Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, also a champion of Philippine independence. The two senators reviewed an "Independence parade" held for their benefit, and made several speeches.

The public's reception of the information that the two United States senators were parties to a demonstration against the flag and American policies has been chilly, not to say resentful, and chiefly for the reason it does not seem fitting, in the least, that governmental representatives should permit themselves to embarrass the position of their government by actions calculated to influence legislation not yet passed.

Senators Hawes and Pittman are sponsoring a bill for complete Philippine independence. Until it is disposed of definitely, it would be better for them to refrain from stirring up trouble in the islands. They do not represent majority opinion yet, by any means. No intelligent American is against independence for the Philippines, but most intelligent Americans are aware of the need to grant that independence only when the islands' inhabitants are capable of using it to their advantage. It is much more than idle rumor, furthermore, that Philippine politicians are interested in complete independence more for private political reasons than for the purpose of upholding their convictions.

Senator Hawes has weakened the case for Philippine independence, and damaged his own reputation as a man of judgment by his recent actions. For his sake, for the sake of the Philippines, and for the sake of the United States senate, it is hoped that the account of his activities last Sunday was exaggerated or

A Game Unworthy of Britain.

Had ground been left for doubt regarding the purpose of Premier Ramsay MacDonald in making his amazing statement concerning our policy as a nation with regard to our sea, air and land forces, it has been eliminated. The manner in which Stanley Baldwin and David Lloyd George have followed his lead makes manifest that his utterance was the opening gun in a campaign to place the United States in a false light before the world and that the leaders of the three British parties are as one in a plan to place this country on the defensive in entering the coming disarmament conference in Geneva.

The substance of the MacDonald statement was that this country was more powerfully armed today on land, at sea and in the air than we were following the Washington conference, and that we are today expending more in developing our sea, land and air armaments than we did then—a statement which has been proved without foundation and which Premier MacDonald should have known, if he did not, was without foundation.

In the face of the statement of Chairman David A. Reed, of the senate committee on military affairs, showing the marked reduction in both the man power of our army and navy and the reduction in expenditures for those branches of our military establishment—a statement supported by the exact figures—David Lloyd George bobs up with a statement to the effect that, despite the treaty proposed and negotiated by us for the renunciation of war—the Kellogg-Briand treaty—our armaments are more powerful than they were before the war and have since been increased.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin takes another tack. His charge is that our course in refusing to enter the League of Nations has made every international problem faced by Europe incomparably more difficult.

One might think that the country whose army was fighting with its "back to the wall" when this country went to the rescue of the Allies; that the country which this country saved from heavy penalties at least, if not from extinction; that the country for which, with others, we turned defeat into victory, permitting it to exact heavy reparations from Germany and the lion's share of the colonial possessions of which Germany was despoiled; that Great Britain, to make plain our meaning, would be above the misrepresentation which she, through her political leaders, is practicing. And it may be noted that we have not brought out the awful cost we had to pay in precious lives or the billions we expended in doing it.

Britain can not be blamed for desiring to maintain her great superiority in sea power at the least possible expense to her, but she should be above using disreputable methods to do it by seeking to put in a false light before the world the only nation financially capable of taking that superiority from her and attaining supremacy over her on the high seas.

"Sometimes when I am low in the mind," says Tallulah Bankhead, "I think I'll end it all by getting married." Tallulah should go in for a standing-on-the-head marathon at the earliest possible date.

The Bishop of Chelmsford says he "would sooner have a man with first-class gumption and third-class brains than a man with third-class gumption and first-class brains." No fault to be found with that if the possession of first-class gumption implies the making use of it when occasion demands.

Senator or Vice President.

Political flies are buzzing round the head of Vice President Curtis again. For several months they have returned to that point intermittently as attractions elsewhere increased or diminished.

Will the Vice President desert the ticket and go back again to being a Kansas senator? The answer, muffled as yet, sounds more and more like an affirmative one. But much depends.

For one thing, no one believes that Charles Curtis, much as he professes to like being a senator, will take any chances of throwing over the vice presidency unless he is sure of picking up a senatorship. Speculators who know nothing about Mr. Curtis other than that he was politician enough to be a runner-up in the winning ticket can bank on that.

Therefore, if public announcement is made that Vice President Curtis is deserting the Republican ticket in the 1932 contest to run for senator, one conclusion can be made safely: Mr. Curtis has looked over the Kansas situation and is positive he has it under control.

It will not be a sign as spokesmen for the other political party would have the public believe, that a shrewd Republican is deserting the ship before it goes down. It is well known that Mr. Curtis prefers the duties of a senator to those of presiding over the senate. He admits it. If he can get any pleasure in his declining years by returning to the senate—and Kansas wants him there—more luck to him.

As for President Hoover's running-mate—that shouldn't be much trouble. Any one of a number could pull as great a vote as Charles Curtis, with full appreciation of the latter's prestige west of the Mississippi. Most of the tears that will be shed if he decides to become a senator will be of a suspicious crocodile texture.

A writer remarks that "good business and good manners have quite a lot to do with one another." The only criticism of that is that possibly it might have been better had he given preference to good manners in the sentence.

The new 47,000-ton Italian liner, Rex, which is to be followed by a sister ship, the Dux, is to be launched next Sunday, fifteen months after the laying down of her keel. If anybody labors under the impression that the Italians have not picked up some ideas on speedy ship construction, he should wake up.

It was enough to deprive Germany of her colonies, her vessels of war and commerce and the rolling stock of her railroads and force her to assume a heavy bill by way of reparations without this last outrage of breaking into her embassy in Washington and stealing the stars of the nation.

THE MONUMENT BEACON.

With a fund of $15,000 available for the lighting of the Washington monument to make the shaft visible to night-flying aviators, the Director of Public Buildings and Public Parks is proceeding with plans for this work. Two great searchlights are to be obtained at once, to be placed as to illuminate the four sides of the 55-foot tip. Meanwhile a study is being made of the proper method of illuminating the shaft itself—the great five-hundred-foot stretch of masonry. This is not as simple a matter as would seem at first thought. Batteries of lights must be placed as to sweep the monument evenly from bottom to top. They must be at sufficient distance from the shaft to place it within the range of full power of illumination. The equipment can not be moved back and forth, for it is heavy, and, furthermore, must be served with current from established lines. It is undesirable to have the apparatus housed in unsightly structures, and now an effort is being made to design "containers" that can be used as rest benches during the day.

When night flying began in this vicinity the Washington monument was the terror of pilots. The comparatively feeble light thrown up on the upper part of the shaft from one of the hotels did not make it sufficiently visible to be surely avoided. Red lights were recently placed in the windows at the tip, but these, while visible at close range, were not surely identifiable from the heights at which planes were usually flown toward the city. While the experienced pilot knows his landmarks thoroughly, a fixed red light is not an assured guide.

It is confidently expected that there will be a great increase in night flying between Washington and other cities. Already the day service makes the "lane" between Washington and Newark, for example, quite the busiest in the world. There must be no high dangers near this airport, and the illumination of the Washington monument—which incidentally will make the shaft a glory by night as by day—will eliminate the most serious peril to flying in darkness.—Washington Star.

STEALING THUNDER.

The administration's proposal of a moratorium on war debts contained so much promise that Democratic leaders did not dare to attack it. They applauded it instead; and now some of them are trying to annex it by asserting that it is merely an application of the internationalism preached by Woodrow Wilson. The assertion leans heavily on credulity.

The only Democratic or Wilsonian thing about the proposal is that it is a natural and inevitable consequence of the treaty of Versailles, which Wilson signed and the senate rejected.

An idea prevails among many Americans that Washington and the Federalists and their Republican successors are solely responsible for our traditional aloofness from Europe.

That is not altogether true. It was not Washington but Jefferson, father of Democracy, who said: "Peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none." The Federalist doctrine was stated with these words: "It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world . . . we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies."

The essence of Woodrow Wilson's foreign policy was to entangle the United States in a permanent alliance with so much of the foreign world as was contained in the League of Nations. The moratorium proposal made by Washington is the Federalist doctrine; and if an alliance and it is not permanent; and if it is entangling it is so because it would take the control of any one country have brought the nations of the world closer together.—Detroit Free Press.

A Factor in Good Health.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

We hear more about health than heaven. To mortal man, surprising as it is, health seems the more important.

But talk about it as we may, we really do little to improve health. In the last analysis, we do about as much to get to heaven as we do to get health.

If it were not for our natural possessions of muscles, nerve and vigor, most of us would be invalids. Yet in spite of all we do in the way of abusing our bodies, we live out the normal expectation. Nature is extremely kind to us.

Really, there are many puzzles in life. Human experience makes us skeptical of the real value of the many things which are heralded as essential to health.

Personally, I am not a bit doubtful of their importance and of what benefits they can give. It would be better for all of us if we could make ourselves observe the simple rules of hygiene. But our memories are short, and yielding to life's temptations is the easiest thing we do. We can resist everything but appetite.

Without conceding a thing as to the importance of these rules of living, I wish to turn aside from the usual preachments about health. I want to ask you today what is the most important thing in your life. What is the most compelling factor in your existence?

What you are, how you act, how your heart behaves, how your food digests, what your general welfare is depend to an amazing degree upon your state of mind. Your happiness or your unhappiness determines your physical state to a remarkable extent.

As I study the problems of existence it seems to me happiness is the really essential possession. There can be no doubt, of course, that the physical and mental states are intimately related. Anything that lowers the vitality affects unfavorably the mental condition.

But to an immeasurable degree the state of mind governs the physical well-being. As a man thinks in his heart so is he. If you keep that brain of yours functioning along normal lines you will have solved the chief problem of the mysterious thing we call "health."

Cultivate calmness, poise, cheerfulness, contentment and happiness; then you will be fit to run life's race and win the victor's crown!

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES
M. H. Q.—Would a tubercular patient—lung trouble—advanced stage, subject to vomiting after every meal, necessarily have a stomach or intestinal infection of the same disease? This condition has been going on for a period of eight months or so, although there is no dysentery. The patient is confined to the bed.

A.—Not necessarily. The doctor attending the case should be able to give you full information and advice along these lines since he is familiar with the underlying facts or circumstances.

MRS. M. H. E. B. Q.—What can be done to strengthen the muscles of the intestines—I have a contraction of these parts?

A.—It would be best to have your doctor advise you along these lines since he is familiar with the underlying condition.

E. E. G. Q.—What would cause red triangular patches behind the ears and in the back of the neck? The patient is a man of forty-two and otherwise has very little trouble in his face or complexion.

A.—It would be rather difficult to advise you along these lines without seeing the blemishes in question and examining the patient. A skin specialist should be able to help in this case.

A. S. T. Q.—Is buttermilk harmful for the complexion?

2.—What will help a slight tendency to double-chin?

3.—What can be done for wrinkles?

A.—No. Buttermilk is most beneficial for the system in general.

2.—Systematic massage should be helpful towards this end. Reducing in general should bring about results in this case also. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

3.—Light massage, using a good cold cream or cocoa butter should help to banish such blemishes. — Copyright, 1931, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Galton and Modern Eugenics.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

There was a time when Francis Galton was held in no great esteem as a scientist. His theories were looked at askance, and there was no unanimity of opinion that his methods and conclusions were truly scientific. Although eugenics, for example, bulks large in the writings and categories of modern science, this subject has had to make a long and uphill fight until it reached its present position of dignity as a considerable subject for scientific research.

Recently there has been completed by Karl Pearson, Galton professor in the University of London, the comprehensive biography, "The Life, Letters and Labors of Francis Galton." This work, a genuine literary monument, is a definitive appreciation of Galton as a great scientist. It has been said that no other man of science ever had such a biography to preserve his memory.

During the last decade of Galton's life, Pearson was closely associated with Galton in one common aim: the establishment of eugenics as an accepted branch of science. Galton's final crusade for eugenic principles, asserts Pearson, was the crowning phase of a life whose labors were medicine, evolution, anthropology, psychology, heredity and statistics directly fitted him to be the teacher and prophet of the new faith.

A subject of immense importance in the subject of statistics is the principle of correlation. This principle has proved valuable in many fields, and is coming rapidly into very general use. It is still in the experimental stage, and many researches have been stimulated by this suggestive principle. Galton was deeply interested in the application of statistics to the problems of heredity. It is a singular fact that both Galton and Mendel started with experiments on peas, the former from sweet, the latter from edible peas. It is obvious why Galton chose the former. He selected peas because he wished to avoid, as far as possible, the variation in size of peas within the same pod. Indeed Galton actually gave this reason for selecting peas. Instead of arriving first at the correlation coefficient, he hit upon the idea of regression. Already the correlational calculus, sprung from Galton's peas, has grown and flourished abundantly. Some day it may rival in importance the vast system of factorial genetics which arose from Mendel's peas.

Like all scientists endowed with an active imagination, and faculty of wide-ranging generalization, Galton formulated certain principles which have not stood the test of verification. A sort of forerunner of De Vries, Galton, believed that mutations or "sports," as he called them, demonstrated the discontinuous character of evolutionary process. The unexpected law of universal regression, which Galton confidently formulated, has now been shown not to be an absolute law. This display of Galton's so-called law does not prove, however, that "variations proper" have been the basis of evolution. Galton believed they were inherited, but considered them of no importance in evolution. Unfortunately the disproof of this so-called law which is no law, removed Galton's chief reason for belief in evolution by discontinuity, that is, by sports or mutations. As Pearson has clearly indicated, the law of "universal regression" is only true when we neglect ancestry beyond the parents and suppose mating at random, but there are not the conditions which exist when intense selection is taking place and the selected interbreed.—Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Bridgeport, Ohio.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

Bridgeport, Ohio, had two names before the present one was settled on her. It was first called Kirkwood after Captain Robert Kirkwood, who first built a cabin on the site in 1790. In 1806 Ebenezer Zane enlarged the place and called it Canton. It developed that Canton in Stark county, which was laid out the year before, as it was called at first, and then it was changed to Bridgeport.

Kirkwood was born in Newark, Delaware, in 1730. He had an academic education and was a farmer. In the War of the Revolution Delaware could maintain but one regiment, and Kirkwood was captain of one of the companies. After the battle of Camden his was the only company, and because of this fact, he could have no service promotion, though he served throughout the war. He was, however, given the brevet rank of major.

After the war he came west and settled beyond the Ohio, as it was called above. In 1791 his cabin was attacked by Indians who set fire to it. Kirkwood and members of his family, aided by a number of soldiers who were with him, fought off the Indians with their rifles and managed to quench the fire by water and damp earth again and again until dawn came and the Indians withdrew.

Kirkwood later moved to Delaware, and though quite old, entered military service in the campaigns against the Indians, and was killed in that service in the battle of Miami. Kirkwood figures in the given names of quite a number of places and towns in Ohio, and most of them were named in honor of this old Revolutionary war hero, who survived that war only to give his life in trying to free the western country of the Indians.

Dust at Sea.

So for lack of something to do I am for a round of dusting. I run a meal smooth surface, too. Tonight a dust storm is expected. I expect to be one of the old

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

When one mentions seaside resorts mind automatically registers such names as Deauville, Biarritz, Lido, Atlantic City, Beach, Waikiki, or Coronado, the choice depending upon one's ambition and the part of the world in which he may be at the moment. One would never think of South Africa land of bathing beaches, surfboards and baths. More likely it would be thought the habitat of howling Zulus and fero animals.

If one steps ashore in South Africa at C town—and the chances are heavy that will—one can follow the coast of Africa as the Cape of Good Hope and up along the Indian ocean to Durban, for that city, you know is one of Africa's east coast seaports. All this route are resort towns. Mossel, Knysna, Port Elizabeth and East London reached in the order named and each one something to attract the sportsman. I mean, golf courses and bathing beaches. At East London are the famous Buffalo and Nahoon rivers for boating fishing and offering a change from the scenery.

It is extremely pleasant to motor from London to Durban. The road leads through the native villages, past plantations of cane and clumps of plum and banana trees. The color of the verdure is exquisite in brilliancy. There are all shades of mingling with the bright green and harmonizing perfectly with the blue of the sky, the sea and the more greenish color of lagoons and streams over which one passes.

And then you arrive at Durban, the last watering place of South Africa. It is a port, this Durban. Eastern customs dress, bright European in an ever-changing scene. Along the bay stretches an esplanade from which one can see numberless yachts at anchor, the white sails flapping in the breeze. The beach is a perfect bath place, decorated with gardens, fountains, inviting terraces.

But the beauty and charm of Durban do not stop at the water's edge. Back of city is a range

THE PENALTY OF GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these things are not at all necessary. Gray hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and she is on the shelf.

This is the result of longer handling the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original youthful color. No complicated "color plan" is needed. A simple bottle of Canute Water is all that is needed. Not only the color, but the hair itself is restored. It really is surprising what successful, youthful results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good drug store and let it tell its own story. It will restore your money. Sold and recommended by Eckard Drug, or your own druggist.—The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The New York fur dealer says that the prices of fur pieces are the lowest in 15 years.

Prices are much lower. One of New York's largest furriers, with connections throughout the entire country, said today that fur coats and suits are now at the lowest figure that can be expected for 15 years.

In keeping with the lower costs, this firm reported a 2000 per cent increase in fur sales in the period from last autumn up to now, as compared with a year ago.

PLANES TABOO FOR HUNTERS

New State Order Prohibits Use of Airplanes To Raise Waterfowl.

The state department of agriculture, division of conservation, has taken definite steps toward conserving the waterfowl population of Ohio, new provisions of the code regulating game limits show. A copy of new rules was received today by Everett B. Grigsby, clerk of courts.

Airplanes are taboo in wild waterfowl hunting, the new rules maintain. Planes and powder boats cannot be used to scare wild waterfowl and cause them to rise from the water.

Wild waterfowl of every kind may be taken only during specified seasons during the next year, one of the orders provides. Hunting can only be done from half an hour before sunrise to sunset during the open season, with the exception of Sunday hunting which is barred.

Jacksnipe limits are fixed at 15 for one day, and the open season is designated as Oct. 1 to Dec. 31. The same rules apply to wild ducks.

During a five year period, beginning this year, the daily limit for coot will be 25 birds. The season for these birds is Oct. 1 to Nov. 30. Not more than 15 gallinules may be taken during the same season during the next four years, another rule provides.

The Hungarian partridge bag limit is four in one day. For a five year period, the open season is fixed from Nov. 15 to Nov. 25. Not more than four wild geese, including the Snow goose, Blue

Additions to the regular staff of camp leaders were made yesterday. Herman Rhu was named assistant life guard and first aid assistant. PAY IN $28,781

Tax Collections Still Running Behind Last Year.

Marion city and county taxpayers brought $28,781.66 to the county treasurer's office yesterday to boost receipts in the June tax collection to $289,157.09. Although this figure is sizeable for a single day's receipts, the collection is $75,103.33 behind the corresponding date a year ago, Bert J. Shelton, treasurer, said.

Approximately $4,000 was paid in last night when the office remained open from 7 to 9 to accommodate taxpayers who are at work during office hours.

2 HELD IN RAID

Police Get Liquor, Beer on East George Street.

One hundred and one pint bottles of beer, a half pint of whiskey and 12 gallons of mush, were gathered in by the police in two raids on east George street late last night. A man and woman are being held awaiting a hearing before Municipal Judge W. R. Martin. Shortly after 10 p. m. Nuzzo Utiano of 206 east George street was taken into custody by the police after 76 bottles of beer were found at his home. Quintilla Sica, 38, of 204 east George street next fell a victim of the police when 25 bottles of beer, a half pint of liquor and 12 gallons of mush were found at her home by the police.

Service Cut To Be Decided in Columbus

Whether interurban service between Marion and Bucyrus will be reduced from seven to four round trips daily probably will be decided at a hearing before the state utilities commission July 29, according to an International News Service report from Columbus.

At that time, the application of the C. D. & M. Electric Co. to curtail its service between Marion and Bucyrus, because of a falling off in business and a resulting shrinkage in receipts from the line, will be taken up by the commission.

Law Against Speculative Short Selling Forecast

Wheat Situation Expected To Have Prominent Place in Next Congress; Hoover Giving Problem Close Attention.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 14 — The domestic wheat crisis was drawing President Hoover's attention back from the European situation today.

Wheat has sunk to the lowest prices ever recorded just at the time farmers in middle western states are hauling their harvest to market.

Agitation for private "moratoriums" is spreading among western farmers who are using the president's war debt moratorium plan and the arguments for it as a precedent. While such arrangements would be matters of private agreement between farmers and their creditors, some officials here would regard it as unfortunate if any such practice should lead to the central idea that debts can be escaped.

The wheat situation is expected to lead to numerous developments next winter, if not before.

Many in the administration believe congress will enact a law entirely prohibiting speculative short selling of grain.

Agitation in the middle west is showing aggressive symptoms which recall the belligerent movements of the Populist days in their hostility to administration economics. The argument is being raised in middle western newspaper comment that if the administration can forego $260,000,000 in a debt moratorium for Europe, it ought to do something for those at home.

Vice President Charles Curtis and Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, Kansas, are in communication by telegraph over a new relief proposition which they hope to put up to the administration. The situation is made more difficult because of a widespread feeling here that underneath all of the farm relief agitation, there is no real cure for the farmer except to raise less wheat.

This view is emphasized by the farm board on every occasion and it is recognized by many politicians who in the meantime are calling on Washington to do something in the present emergency. Two years campaigning for acreage reduction have brought negligible results. The harvest in Kansas this year breaks all records.

The long-standing suspicion which farmers have voiced grain speculators has been so accentuated by President Hoover's recent condemnation of speculative short-selling that in the administration ranks there is an exception that congress will prohibit such trading and may even go further.

Youth Acquitted of Reckless Driving

R. J. Shumaker, 20, of 587 north Main street, arrested on a reckless driving charge late Tuesday afternoon after the machine he was driving on east Center street crashed into the rear of a machine driven by Ora Burchfield, was found not guilty by Municipal Judge W. R. Martin this morning.

A young woman riding with Shumaker and at whom witnesses said Shumaker was looking at the time of the collision, received cuts to her nose and chin when she was thrown against the instrument board of the car by the impact. Both cars were damaged.

No wonder Women are switching to Camels

Smoke a FRESH cigarette

The steady increase in the number of women who are switching to Camels is a tribute to the mildness of this cigarette.

A woman's throat is more delicate than a man's—more easily irritated by the unkindly hot smoke of parched, dry-as-dust tobaccos.

Camels are milder, first, because they are throat-friendly blend of fine Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos that require no parching.

Camels are milder, second, because all pepper dust is removed by a special vacuum-cleaning process before Camels are air-sealed in the Humidor Pack of germ-safe moisture-proof Cellophane.

Camels are milder, third, because this wrapping of moisture-proof Cellophane prevents the cigarettes from drying out. The natural moisture of the tobacco is held intact.

When you inhale the cool fragrant smoke of Camel you enjoy all the flavor, all the aroma of blended fine tobaccos kept in prime smoking condition—without the sting and bite-and-burn of stale, dried-out cigarettes.

Just try Camels, join the throng and switch them for one day, then quit them—if you can.

● Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack protection against perfume and powder odors, dust and germs. It delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until the last one has been smoked.

MOON of DELIGHT by Margaret Bell Houston

CHAPTER 1
STRANGE TREASURE

WHEN the two chests had been brought up the stairs and deposited in his room, Umberto gave Gabreau a four-bit piece. Gabreau snarled, turning his face away. He dared do little more, Umberto was broad and landed Gabreau was a dwarf, a squat four feet high, with large, bushy hands, and deep-set eyes. He was not content with a few coins for his labor. He took the same risks as the others. Tonight, if the officers had caught him, he would have paid. More than that, he was a slave. Slavery was the blood of the South. Often Gabreau, born in New Orleans, docks, said to himself, the blood of the South.

He told his mother that he would demand more. "To be a man," he said, "I must be twice as strong." He mumbled now, "I am not."

"You got half," Umberto said. "Half dollar."

He pushed Gabreau out. Gabreau was stronger than he and looked the door. He heard the door closed, then he closed the window shutters of the window.

A bare room with a bare table, a chair, a lamp, a carved wooden bedstead, a stove. Smoke from the stove had streaked the walls and dimmed the rich colors of the long gilt-framed mirror.

Umberto set the lamp before the mirror that he might have a stronger light. He drew up the smaller chest. It was empty, but it came open quickly. Crystals, rainbows, and cool.

He turned to the larger chest. Gabreau had grumbled when they carried it, but he had not grumbled when they carried the smaller chest. Not often to call on Gabreau to help him carry things. Gabreau was a look-out. To-day, however, it was a heavy chest and too beautiful to leave. He had abandoned a smaller chest to take Umberto examined the chest. Ebony, exquisitely carved in an open-work design as that one saw through it something that gleamed. The lid fitted tightly, but as he jerked the handle, it opened and Umberto looked on the thing that gleamed.

Silk, yellow, translucent, shot with little black gems. A rope of pearls, a bracelet set with emeralds—Umberto drew back, reached for the lamp, held it close.

The bracelet glowed on a wrist, slender, ivory-colored. Under the folds of silk a woman's form lay in the chest. Her dark, unbound hair covered her face, and there was no sign of breath.

The lamp shook so Umberto set it down. He backed away from the chest. In all his adventures as burglar, pickpocket, highwayman, he had never known the object of his quest. To what crime had he fallen heir? Gabreau would be witness to that. Ah! Gabreau had wanted half. He Gabreau let him have all.

But in the act of lowering the lid he halted. The silks were stirring, almost imperceptibly. The slim wrist lifted, a white hand moved to the hair, pushing it away. She sat up, a pale girl, gazing at the lid of the chest, beside her, then slowly her eyes moved about the room until they rested on Umberto. She sprang from the chest, staring at him from storm-dark eyes.

Umberto's relief was such that he felt faint. He stared at the girl, who to his recovering senses seemed an apparition. She was perhaps not more than 20. Her evening dress—a jeweled slip with a rose half torn from the shoulder—was stained and crumpled. Her black hair fell about her. In their cold slippers her feet were the smallest he had ever seen.

Whether because she was dark enough to have been his countrywoman, or because in excitement he lapsed into his mother-tongue, Umberto could not know, but he spoke to her in Italian—a voluble flow that rose to the heights of repressed wrath.

Her pallor grew deeper and she spread out a hand against the wall, closing her eyes. There was no water at hand, but there was wine—priceless wine that had been mourning its owner. Umberto opened the old smothered, poured a glassful. She drank in gulps, steadied herself by the table, resumed her stormy gaze at him. Apparently she had not understood the Italian. Umberto translated it into the only other tongue he knew.

"How you getta that way?" pointing to the chest. "I bring you here and think you dead. I got 'nough troubles. What for you do these?"

Her eyes moved to the door behind him.

"No, you don't go," stated Umberto. Spanish was probably her language and there were those in New Orleans who would understand her when she

The balcony framed a flowered court, centered by a fountain and reached by a slender stair. Not far from the stair the gambling room of Jason Divitt housed their activities till 3 o'clock in the morning. It was now 4. Divitt would have counted his earnings and gone to his wife's room, the room directly beneath Umberto's with its great bed and Spanish lace curtains which Molly Divitt had picked up in the shops on Royal street. Molly had been ailing for a month. Umberto knocked softly, feel-the s's. "Also I speak Spanish, but not—" Again the slight lift of the shoulder. She scarcely knew how to characterize Conchita's jargon. "I speak Castilian," she explained.

"So you understood us all along," remarked Divitt, aware that he had said nothing to compromise himself. He touched the chest with his foot. "What were you doing in this?"

"Hiding," she said simply, and added, "Who are you?"

"Chief of the customs office," replied Divitt coolly. At which she sank shaking into the seat. "Food and sleep are what you need, and you will take them better if you know the facts."

You are not in the hands of law, Senorita. Quite the contrary. I am not a customs officer, and this lady," indicating Conchita, "is not my chief interpreter. You are the only individual since I have had this place, who has entered without a pass and the proper introduction."

"We are all outside the law here, along with yourself. Therefore we are your friends. We will not ask further about you, and you will ask nothing about us. You will protect us, and we will protect you. Do you understand?"

The girl's eyes moved among them, cautious yet less startled. Resting on Gabreau, they lingered, closed, she dropped her face in her hands.

"Conchita," said Divitt, "take Senorita Basara to the room above the fountain. Give her some food."

Conchita jangled the great iron keys hanging from her waist. The girl rose.

"Just a moment, Senorita," Divitt's voice again. "May I see the bracelet you have on?"

With an almost listless movement she held out her arm. He waited for her to remove the bracelet. She understood, slipped it over her hand.

The inside surface was engraved, as he had known it would be. One word, "Juanita." In that, at least, she had not deceived him.

"Here Senorita," said Divitt. She had turned away, following Conchita. "I have never seen finer emeralds. But I can admire them on your wrist. We do not rob each other here."

"These are bolts on your door, however," he added. "If you care to use them. Big Spanish bolts."

have broken doors at the designated addresses to find not a corpse, but gambling or liquor establishments.

Umberto backed away as she sprang from the chest, staring at him.

related the story of her removal from the Dolores. He might even be accused of kidnapping as well as theft. "Wait," he ordered. "I come back."

The room had one window that, like its one door, opened upon the balcony. Except at the front, there are no windows in the outer walls of the old French quarter of New Orleans. Umberto made certain that the window was fast—he had nailed it against Gabreau's prying some time before—then he went out, locking the door.

ing it well not to disturb her. Silence, and presently without a sound, the opening of the door.

Jason Divitt looked like a little black ant. Umberto would have made three of him, but he ruled Umberto as effectually as Umberto ruled Gabreau. He had come to New Orleans from what was vaguely known as "the west," but he had of him no one—not even Molly, perhaps knew. But he had the manners of a dancing master and the diction of a pedagogue, except when he desired—which frequently happened—to lay them both aside. Silently his ant-like face inquired what Umberto wanted with his knock.

Umberto jerked his head toward the stair in an urgent gesture, and Divitt—in evening clothes—followed him upstairs and into the room.

The girl by the window in Umberto's absence she had fastened up her hair and thrust a high black comb into it. She confronted the men with no semblance of fear in her stormy eyes, yet the observer might have seen the trembling of her clenched hands, the quick rise and fall of her breast. Divitt turned abruptly to Umberto.

"What's this?" he demanded. "Lady," Umberto informed him. "She in da chest." Umberto pointed. "I take it she Dolores. Lady inside. I don't know how she getta that way. Stowaway maybe."

Divitt looked through the chest's contents. Laces, nauticas, a black cape which the girl watched anxiously as he pulled it out.

"She's getta me in trouble," complained Umberto. "I think she dead at first. I ask why she do such thing. She no understand Italian."

"Get Conchita," said Divitt. He threw the things back into the chest while Umberto went down the balcony to the last room on that side. Gabreau and Conchita, his mother, looked at him darkly. Umberto, returning Conchita's look, jerked his head toward his room. She rose heavily, a squat, swart, bulging figure, and waddled behind him, Gabreau following. Divitt was closing the chest.

"Talk to this lady in Spanish," he ordered Conchita.

Conchita discovering the girl in the corner, sat down on the cot. During her three years over Divitt's place she had been called on to face many situations, but to behold unmoved what looked like a caged princess in Umberto's room—a princess who ten minutes before could not have been there—could she?—required something more of her than even she possessed, especially when she had got herself all wrought up over Gabreau's four-bit piece.

"Speak to her," commanded Divitt. "There's so time to lose."

Conchita spoke abundantly, assuring the lady that the weather was fine for the month of February.

"Try her with French," Divitt said to Gabreau.

"Mamma!" he began. The girl faced them abruptly. Her stormy eyes moved over the group.

Way of Law Violators Is Made Harder by Police Radio Outfits

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Police radio systems to aid apprehension of the criminal are increasing rapidly.

As he seeks to elude capture, the fugitive from justice now finds more than 60 cities equipped with the systems, auguring against his success. Others are planning to adopt them. A year ago there were fewer than 10.

Also, the lawbreaker who slips through local police and leaves for a neighboring city finds officials there apprised of all details of his crime when he arrives, provided that city also has a broadcasting system.

Under the plan of the radio commission, adjacent city police radio stations have identical frequencies.

patrolmen in each get the emergency broadcasts simultaneously. State patrolmen in some areas also get the alarm and are on the lookout for the fugitive to intercept him on the highway.

Copulation officials plan a conference within a few months of delegates from radio-equipped police departments to discuss means to improve the instrument's effectiveness.

"A man has just been murdered at such and such an address," some unknown informant telephones headquarters.

The radio flashes the news to cruising patrol cars. Sirens scream as the machines converge on the address.

Grain Prices at Low Scale in Ohio Area

By The Associated Press

LONDON, O., July 16.—The price of wheat has tumbled to a new low figure here, with grain elevators offering 41 cents a bushel.

New low prices are believed to have been reached by rye, at 25c, and new oats expected to start at less than 20 cents a bushel.

Farmers are paying five and a half cents a bushel for threshing and the work is said to be doubly difficult because of the heavy straw this year. There also is a shortage of help, and many farmers are doing their own harvesting.

MARIONITES who like a ride on a cool evening will feel that a trip to Mansfield is a real treat to the rock garden and the reformatory by one of the best roads in the state.

A trip can be made in four hours and from with ample time to view this beautiful piece of rock garden and for lunch at a restaurant. The road is a fine one, and the time to leave is at 4 o'clock, going by way of Marion, Gallia and Ontario, and returning over State Route 42, which brings you into Mt. Gilead. This is a brick and concrete road takes you up one hill and down another, around curves, and through beautiful country. The road runs through Lexington, Johnsville, a quaint town in the dusk, and a few other little cross-roads villages.

The rock garden itself is amazing. Many Marionites boast of their rock gardens, but they'll be amazed at the work of this foreign-born young man. The garden extends a quarter of the way around one of the sloping banks of the lake on the reformatory grounds. Every garden flower imaginable is there in all its luxuriant, fragrant beauty, not to mention a tall rubber plant and species of cacti. A miniature mill, stained brown, and its moss-gathering water wheel, send a stream of water through the garden. Low rustic fences and archways add to the beauty.

Rock garden enthusiasts, persons who love flowers and those who appreciate the efforts of one man in making such a lovely spot in the shadow of the grim walls of the reformatory, should take this evening's ride to Mansfield.

Youth Wises Up

WHAT has become of the craze for "collegiate" automobiles? It appears that the day of the gaily colored, quilt work painted, ancient touring car has passed, to be replaced by sedate black or whatever color happens to be on the car at the time of purchase. Does this go to prove that "modern youth" is becoming aloof and has not sufficient ambition to devote enough time and labor to paint up an old car? A solution of this weighty problem may be that the owners of these "high-powered" tourings profited by the experience of their predecessors and are determined not to have another such craze blow up beneath them and find in their possession a perfectly good car with too much paint on it.

Blame the Hen

It may be of interest to those who are inclined to deprecate the culinary ability of the modern miss to hear of some palatable dishes that were recently prepared by a number of these "persons." The occasion was one of the numerous slumber parties being held at this time of the year. As breakfast time drew near, several of the girls established themselves in the kitchen and proceeded to prepare a "delicious" repast. The coffee was all right, the bread also, and probably the butter. But when the omelet was examined, after a few portions had been devoured, a hard substance was noticed, and upon examination it was discovered that a full sized bolt and screw were reclining in the bottom of the dish. No one was able to explain the phenomenon and it has not been cleared up yet. Still, these girls are not entirely to blame, for who can help it if pieces of hardware conceal themselves in the cooking?

Scientists at the Smithsonian Institution have found that living plants can distinguish between different colors, bending toward radiations that they find hardest on their growth.

PASTOR TO BROADCAST

Rev. S. F. Porter, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist church will broadcast Friday from 8 to 9:30 a. m. from WATU in Columbus. He will be the guest of the Pocket Testament League on the Bible Lovers Meditation program. Accompanying him will be Mrs. Alice Pierce and Mrs. Ruth Sabina, singers and Mrs. Madge Curl, pianist.

Plans are under way for the consolidation of the Spanish radio broadcasting service including a station for transmitting programs to Latin America.

Why be satisfied with SECOND-CHOICE

costs no more?

The department of business research of a great public institution asked 205,000 representative motorists this question:

"Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what tire do you consider the best tire made?"

Look at the chart; the answers totaled there tell the whole story.

They tell it so plainly they suggest another question, likewise straight to the point:

"Why be satisfied with a second-choice tire when the first-choice costs no more?"

Fact is, experienced tire-buyers aren't.

That's why more people ride on Goodyear Tires than any other kind!

HOW CAR OWNERS VOTED ON THE QUESTION

It will be noted that 30.7% of the car owners of America prefer Goodyear tires. This preference is more than twice that of any other make of tire.

"MAN, how they're pouring in! But let 'em come, you heat-tempered fans!"

... challenges Floyd Gibbons as he rolls up sleeves and digs into task of judging winners in Sohio letter-writing contest.

Hello everybody. Well, by the looks of the mounds of contest letters already opened and read, and the looks of the fat mail-sacks waiting to be dug into, Ohio sure is doing her bit to cure that post office deficit they reported from Washington the other day. Some hot weather job, this judging game. But doggoned if a lot of things I'm reading about those godchild motor fuels of mine—the Sohio heat-tempered gasolines—aren't as refreshing as an ocean breeze.

Yes, sir, I'm beginning to see for myself what a warm tip I passed the Sohio bunch when I asked 'em why they didn't get the boys and girls, using heat-tempered Sohio Extra-Ethyl and X-70, to report their actual experiences on the road with these step-ahead fuels—the experiences that keep sales rising and rising. I'll tell the world, the folks driving with those heat-tempered gasolines are even more enthusiastic about them than the Sohio molecule busters themselves.

I want to see every heat-tempered user make a try for that big ol' trip to Europe or a share of that four thousand. Don't be scared off because the letters are coming in by the thousands. Just remember that the dollars to be paid out are up in the thousands, too! And don't be afraid that your grammar and punctuation will count against you if you're one of the average Americans who don't do a lot of writing. I'm no slinger of fancy English myself, and plain talk by plain folks always suits me fine. Cliff and "Midge", my colleagues on the judge's bench are right with me on that point, too.

And now—back to the reading lamp! I'll be back with another spiel in a few days.

STRIPP PULLS AGED HIDDEN BALL TRICK AND REDLEGS WIN 1-0

Brooklyn Squares St. Louis Series by Tramping Cards 10-3; Tribe Beaten.

BY GAYLE TALBOT, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

You would think, offhand, that such a seasoned campaigner as the 38-year-old Walter Rabbit Maranville of the Boston Braves had long since learned not to fall for anything as venerable as the hidden ball trick.

But it was none other than the sprightly Rabbit who was trapped by this oldest baseball legerdemain yesterday as the Cincinnati Reds won a brilliant 1 to 0 pitching duel from the Braves. But for Maranville's lapse there might have been a different result.

Coming up in the ninth after John Ogden had held the Braves to four hits and no runs for eight innings, the Rabbit singled, went to second on a wild pitch and was in position to score the tying run. Then he forgot himself, wandered off the bag and was tagged out with ease and dispatch by Joe Stripp, Cincinnati third baseman.

Climaxed Duel
The trick putout supplied a fine climax to a duel between the veteran Ogden and Lefty Brandt. The Reds made only four hits off the Boston Ace, but scored the winning run in the seventh when Heathcote tripled and crossed the plate on Nick Cullio's fly to Worthington.

The Brooklyn Robins came back to square accounts with the St. Louis Cardinals 10 to 3, when Watson Clark chalked up his seventh straight victory. Lefty O'Doul wounded three Card pitchers for two doubles and two singles and drove in four runs.

Kiki Cuyler's timely single in the seventh, scored Jakey May, who had doubled, gave the Chicago Cubs their second straight over the New York Giants 5 to 4, and put the Hornsbymen within half a game of

ONE THOUSAND SEE LINCOLN PARK BILL

Huber Beats Serv-U-Well 6-3; Presbies Wallop Irish Club in Nightcap, 8-2.

Playing before a crowd of more than a thousand spectators in a pair of benefit games for players recently injured in football here the Huber Manufacturing company's recreation baseball club last night defeated the Serv-U-Well Grocers 6-3 and the First Presbyterian Sunday school nine won from St. Mary's church team 8-2. The double header was played at Lincoln park. Approximately 985 was taken in at the gate. Both games were seven inning affairs.

There is no way by which one can rightfully say that the First Presbyterian team defeated St. Mary's church nine. The team playing under the first name did win from the latter named organization alright but it wasn't the First Presbyterians. Three men, all good players in case you're interested, were competing in the Presbyterian lineup and the Irish team was not up to its full strength. Inasmuch as several of the St. Mary's team played in the Huber game the Irish manager did not play them against the Presbies until the late innings.

Not a Doubt
There is no doubt as to who won the ball game or even as to who had the better team on the field at that time. Don Lindsay, St. Paul Lutheran pitcher, hurled for the Presbyterians and gave up seven safe hits. Gene Gunder allowed the winners to nick him for nine safeties although in all fairness it must be said that the regular Irish outfielders would probably have snared several flies that went for hits.

Kenneth Gallant, Presbyterian third baseman, stole the whole show of this game as far as batting was concerned. He didn't get the most hits but he did drive in the most runs and get the longest hit. In three times up he is credited with scoring three runs. Two of these came as a result of home run clouts and the other was scored on a pair of errors. The first time up he banged a homer, the second time Irish players politely threw the ball around so wildly he never stopped running from the time he left the plate until he crossed it again and the third time he smashed another homer.

Punch Is Missing
The Irish nine lacked the punch necessary to produce hits when they were needed. Twice they had three men on base and were unable to score a single run. Both of their scores came in the last inning.

SAINTS DIVIDE TWIN BILL WITH COLONELS; COLUMBUS WINS TWO

Red Birds Boost Seives in Standings by Double Victory Over Brewers.

BY WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO, July 14.—St. Paul and Louisville today were right where they started at the opening of their important series yesterday, leaving the Saints with their four and one-half game lead intact.

They divided a double header, the Colonels winning the opener, 4 to 2, and St. Paul taking the second, 10 to 7, while Minneapolis divided a pair with Indianapolis to remain one-half game behind Louisville. Hatter outpitched Huck Betteis in the first game, and Nachand's double and homer punched over enough runs to give the Colonels the edge. The Saints opened up in the second game and pounded out 16 hits off Johnny Marcum, Guy Williams, Joe De Berry and Ben Tincup. John Prudhomme held the Colonels scoreless for three innings of the second game, but was nicked for three runs in the fourth and gave way to Bryan Harries, who received credit for the triumph.

Minneapolis piled on a 10 to 9 victory over Indianapolis in the second game of their doubleheader after taking a 20 to 8 mauling in the first contest. The Indians connected 19 times in the opener, and 17 in the afterpiece. A 12-run riot in the fourth inning sewed up the first game, while the Millers rallied in the eighth inning of the second to offset a five-run drive by the Indians in their half. Errors by Sigafos and Goldman paved the road for the Miller rally.

Columbus took up a lot of ground on Milwaukee in the fourth place battle by whipping the Brewers twice, 10 to 9 and 8 to 5. The Brews outlit the Red Birds in the second game, but couldn't do much with Parmalee's relief pitching.

Ash did some excellent relief pitching in the opener to save the decision for Columbus.

Ed Holley restitched Toledo to six hits and kept them so far apart that no runs accrued therefrom. The Blues battered Sarge George Connolly for 18 hits and wound up with a 10 to 0 victory. Holley also batted in three runs with a double and single to help his own cause. The Mud Hens had a bad day in the field, being charged with five misplays, three of them by shortstop Sweeney.

CUBAN POUNDS BASS TO CAPTURE CROWN

"Keed" Chocolate Wins Technical K. O. and Junior Lightweight Title.

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—"Keed" Chocolate, the polished ebony warrior from Cuba, stood today on a modest pedestal a champion, everywhere but in New York state, king of the junior lightweight class.

The Havana news boy scored a technical knockout over Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, before 15,000 of the home folks in the National league ball park last night to rise to the championship heights that had been forecast for him ever since he arrived in New York from Cuba, three years ago. It isn't much of a championship, a synthetic title at best, but it eased in part much of the "Keed's" disappointment, in shooting for the greater crowns of fistiana in his short but brilliant career.

Chocolate was a champion last night of almost any of the lighter classes as he put together all his speed, skill and punching powers to hammer Bass for two seconds short of seven rounds, slash him about the face, mouth and nose and finally cut his left eyelid so badly with crushing rights that Referee Leo Houck stopped the one-sided duel after 2:54 of the seventh.

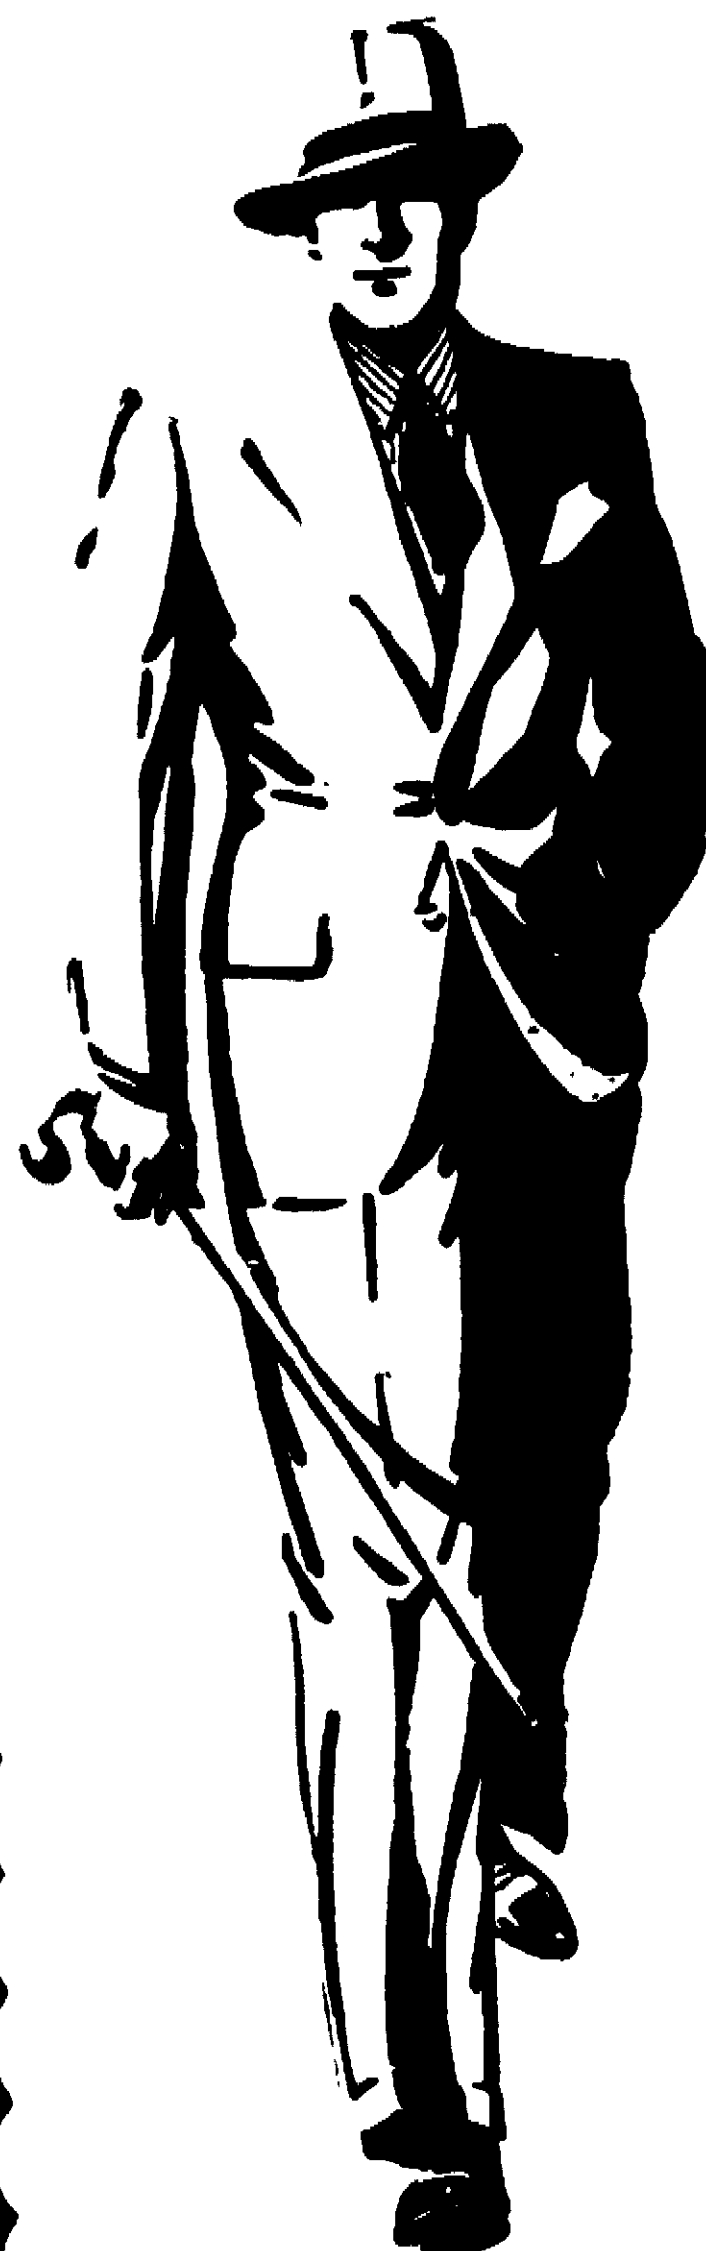

In only the fourth round was Bass able to reach Chocolate with his looping left hooks to the body. Chocolate weighed 125½ pounds, well within the featherweight limit, while Bass, at 128½, was just short of the junior lightweight limit of 130 pounds.

Quits Newspaper Position at Tiffin To Take Over Of- ficial Duties.

State Senator Robert L. Rohe of Tiffin, one of two senators representing the combined Thirteenth and Thirty-first districts, has become a member of the state board of control and board of claims, and has resigned as business manager of the Tiffin Tribune to devote more time to his official duties, he said today.

Senator Rohe became a member of the boards by virtue of his position as chairman of the state senate finance committee. He will sever connections with the Tiffin newspaper Aug. 1.

Although his official duties will require his presence in Columbus frequently, he will continue to make Tiffin his home.

Due to the unusual financial condition existing in the state, the duties of the control board probably will become greater this year than ever before, the senator said in explaining his resignation from the Tiffin Tribune.

Senator Rohe served three terms in the house of representatives before he was elected to the senate in 1926. The board of control adjusts the appropriations of the state department and the board of claims passes on claims.

John P. Bower of Rushsylvania is fellow-senator with Rohe in this district.

LOAF SIZE O K

Sealers Ruling Will Not Affect Local Bakeries.

Action of the Ohio Sealers' association in fixing 16 ounces for the minimum weight of loaves of bread in Ohio will not affect Marion bakers, they said today. As the most common size of loaves baked here is 24 ounces, the minimum of 16 ounces will not require any change.

The minimum weight was fixed during the annual convention of the association in Sandusky this week. A limitation on weight of bread loaves was declared necessary in view of the recent decision of Judge J. M. Killits of the United States district court at Toledo, in holding the federal law regulating bakers as unconstitutional.
